Re: DA 12-1863, IB Docket No. 12-340; RM-11683

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

Wireless innovation has become increasingly important to individuals, schools and small businesses. Arguably, it is nearly impossible for any business to be successful without wireless technology and innovative solutions. As such, the Commission should do everything in its power to help our citizens be competitive in this global economy by ensuring access to emerging wireless technology.

As a real estate agent, I rely on my smartphone as do many other business owners. As prices go up, it seems like service, coverage and speed go down. This trend must change as we continue to rely more and more on wireless networks.

From recent news stories, I have become intrigued and want to lend my voice on behalf of LightSquared and its desire to build out a new wireless broadband network for the American people.

I understand that LightSquared has put forth a solution to move forward from the debate surrounding interference with GPS devices. The company is willing to let some of their spectrum go unused to protect GPS devices if the FCC will allow the company to share a smaller swath of spectrum with the federal government. In the company's filing, LightSquared states unequivocally that it will use the relevant shared spectrum "in a manner that will protect the integrity of continuing, essential government operations."

Cooperation among the federal government and private industry seems smart and reasonable and ultimately could help us be more competitive as a country.

I hope the Commission will approve LightSquared's request to modify its license so it can provide a new nationwide wireless broadband service.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Kim Prenger
